Supervised Visits

Let's be honest if you have been to court and ordered or asked to do a Supervised visit it's probably not going well at this point.

Creative Potential prides our self on supporting families getting back to a good place and helping children see their parents or grandparents

There is no reward for parenting alone

Is it easier to raise a child when it is just your choices YES! But guess what children need a village to help raise them, get them to appointments, talk to them, support their activities and support their ideas, up's & downs and LOVE THEM. Supervised visits help a non-custodial parent reestablish a relationship and bond with a child or children. During the visit we write notes on the interaction(s) between the child and parent that may support or establish parents being able to have more unsupervised time with their child/ children.

What to ask court?

- Ask the judge who should be paying for visit? Both parents or just the non - custodial parent?
- Frequency of visit(s) 2 hours once a week for two months or maybe 4 hours a week for one month
- What is the consequence if the parental parent prevents the non-custodial parent from supervised visit?
- Who is allowed at the visit? Can you bring grandparent or your spouse to the visit?
- When is the next court date to review the supervised visit notes and ask for non-supervised time/ visits?
- Ask the judge to note all above in the court order.

Why the above is important

Supervised visits are not cheap, and we want your time with your child and the time in court to be effective and worth your time and money. Having the above items in line before leaving court will save both sides time, money and an understanding of what is expected for visit and lessen limitation and access to your beautiful children.

"Your company is the greatest. I can't imagine anyone living without you all."
—J. Robinson
